Digital Health Solutions

The implementation of new digital tools within the development of drugs and diagnostics is more relevant today than ever before. Almost daily, new collaborations between pharma, biotech and IT companies are announced across Europe. French Sanofi has teamed up with Google, Swiss Novartis is working closely with Qualcomm Life and platforms such as myTomorrows or PatientsLikeMe will change the way patients communicate with companies.

The 9th Berlin Conference will explore the potential of digital health solutions for the European biotechnology and pharma industry. It will provide insights into financial issues, clinical aspects, the legal environment, the most recent Bio-IT and big data research trends and their relevance for the industry. In addition, five start-ups from across Europe will present new business opportunities to digital health investors.

The BIOCOM event is organised in close collaboration with the S&T Department of the French Embassy in Berlin. It offers a unique opportunity to meet top-class European pharma and biotech experts from science and industry in an exclusive location in the heart of the German capital.
